About UMORE

Discover the story behind UMORE. Rooted in creativity and guided by emotion, our collections are designed to help you find your mood and bring it beautifully to life.

Ceramic

Playful or poetic, bold or understated, our ceramic tile collections invite you to explore color, pattern, and texture in ways that express your unique design story.

Porcelain

Where beauty meets resilience, our porcelain tiles capture the romance of natural materials with the strength to support everyday life.

Stone

Timeless and organic, our stone tile offerings celebrate raw beauty rich with texture, depth, and the quiet elegance only nature can create.

The Language of Tile

A curated glossary of tile terms and definitions to guide your journey, so you can design with confidence and clarity while discovering your mood.

What's your mood?

Our Purpose

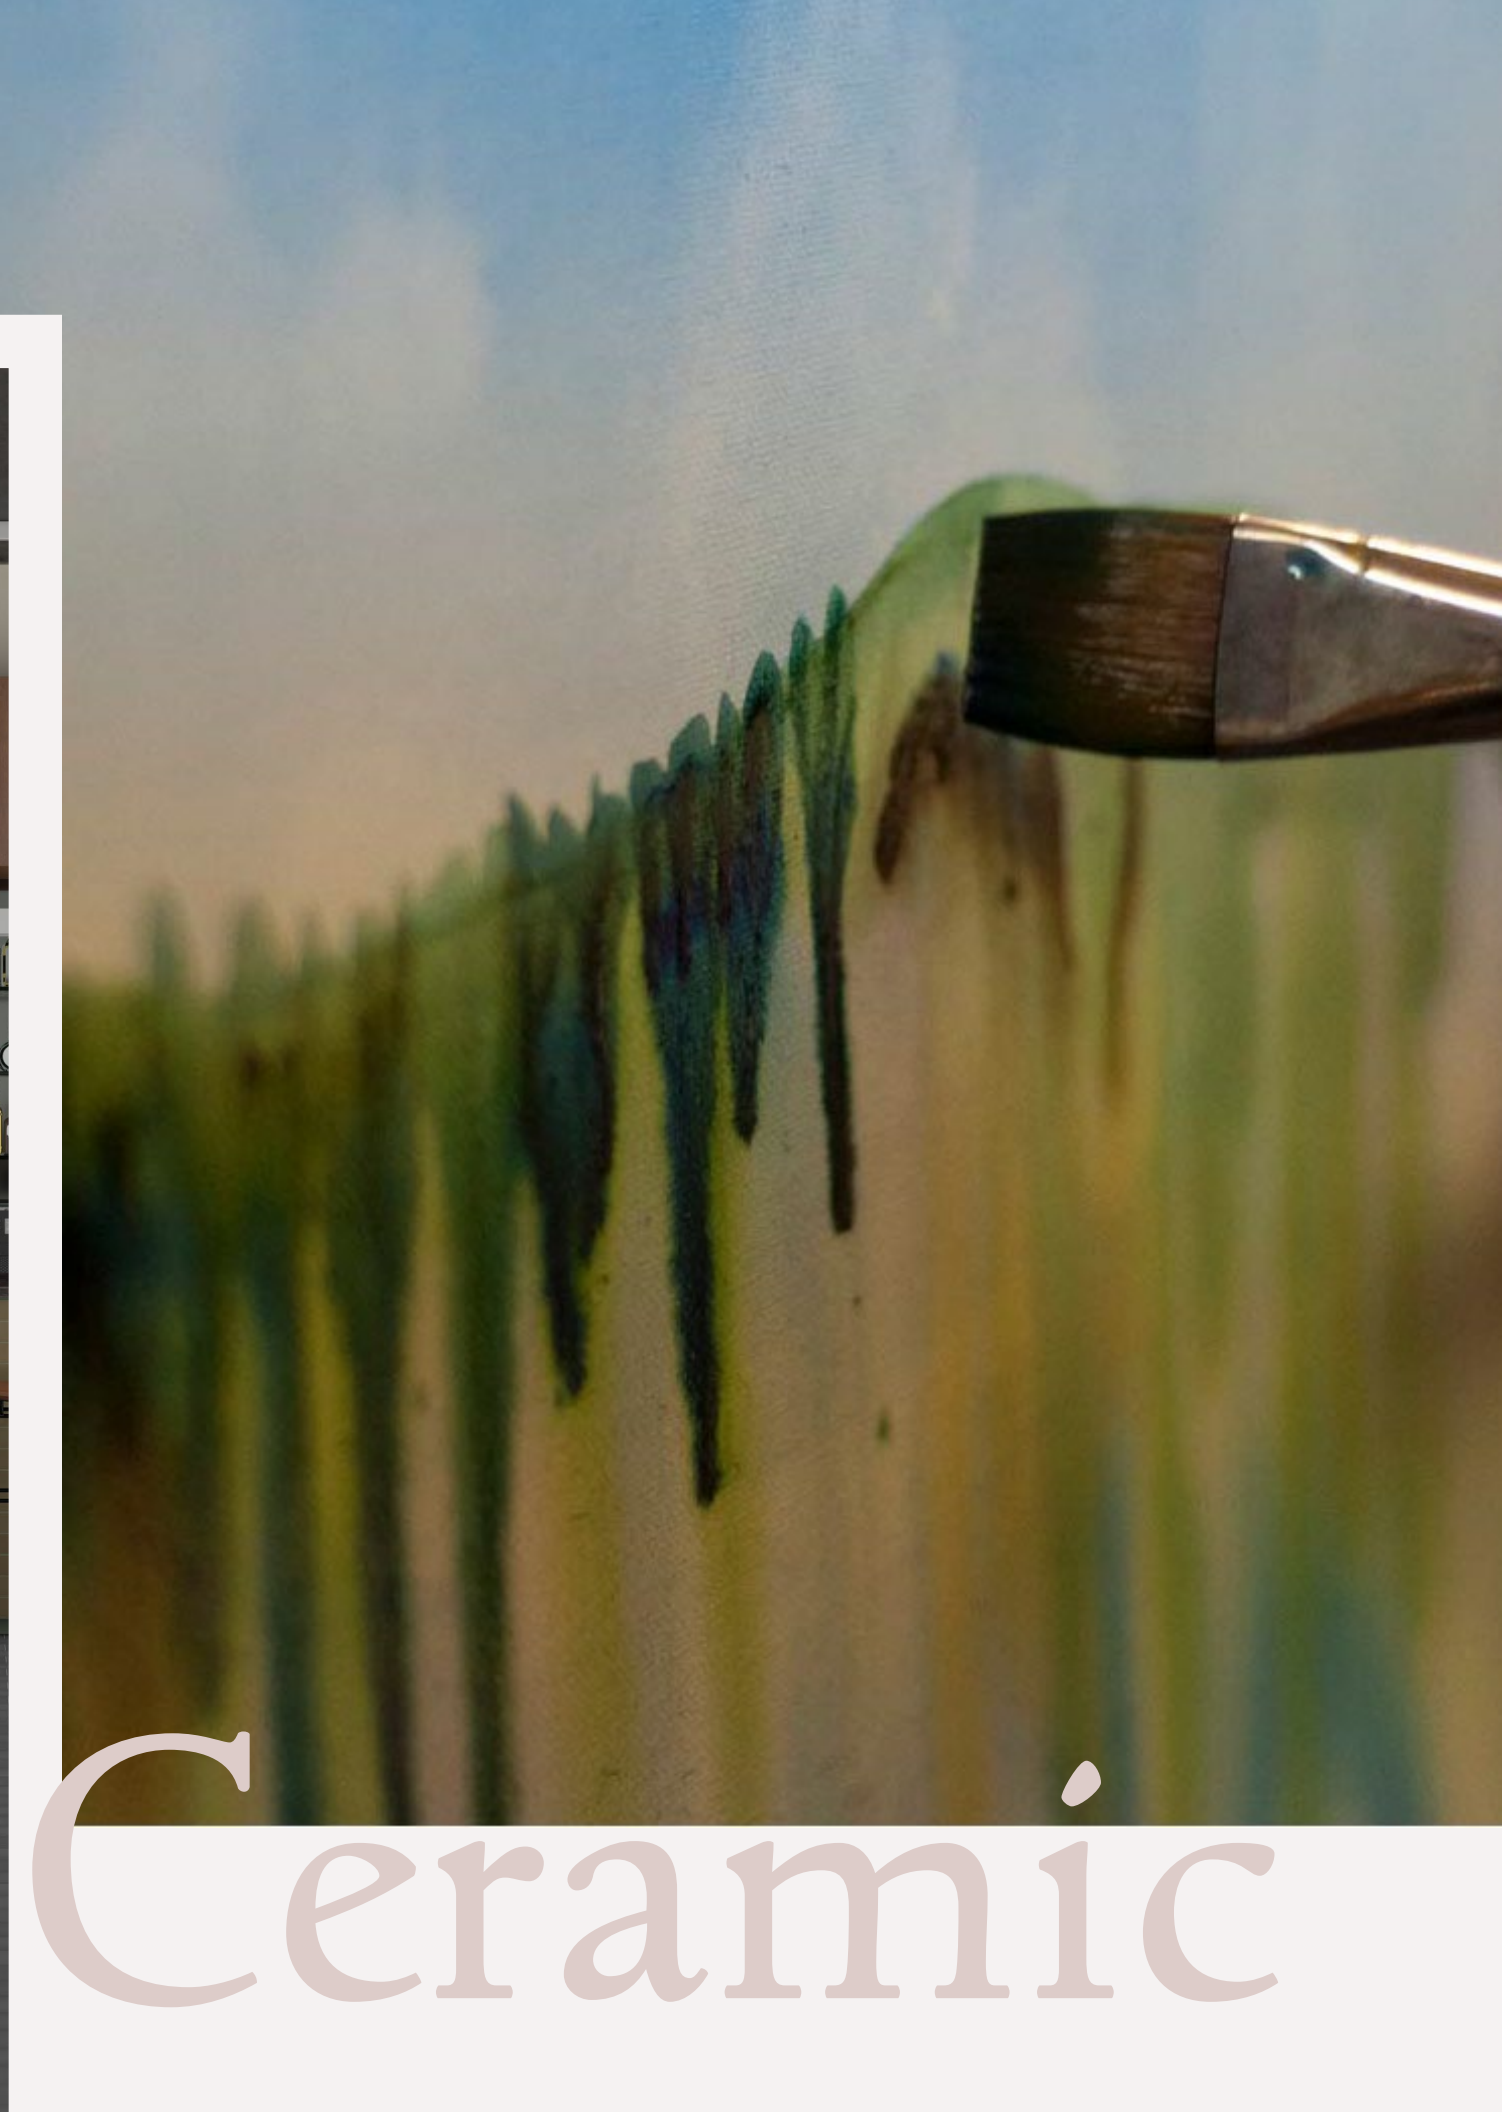

At UMORE™, we believe a mood serves as the foundation upon which your creativity is constructed. Our purpose is to inspire creators and designers to shape spaces that evoke emotion, expression, and character. Rooted in thoughtful materiality and elevated design, we empower you to construct environments that reflect your unique vision, one tile at a time.

Our Services

UMORE™ offers a curated selection of porcelain and ceramic floor and wall tile in a range of styles, colors, and sizes supported by a dedicated team of tile experts. Each collection is thoughtfully designed to support creative exploration and material storytelling, allowing surfaces to play an integral role in the overall design narrative. We invite you to explore our collections and find your UMORE.

The Language of Tile

Salerno Pearl

Body (Material)

The internal composition of a tile. Common types include porcelain, ceramic, pressed glass, and stone, influencing durability and performance.

Bullnose

A trim tile with one rounded edge, used for finished edges, countertops, and transitions.

Ceramic Tile

A clay-based tile fired in a kiln, typically glazed, and best suited for walls and light-duty floor applications.

Color Body

A tile whose surface color extends through the body, helping disguise chips and wear.

DCOF (Dynamic Coefficient of Friction)

A measurement of slip resistance for tiles when walked on, commonly used to evaluate performance in wet or commercial environments.

Edge

- Rectified: Mechanically cut edges for precise sizing, allowing for minimal grout joints and a clean, modern look. Common in commercial floor applications.
- Non-Rectified (Pressed): Machine-Pressed edges from the molding process, typically requiring wider grout joints.

Faces

The number of unique printed designs within a tile series. More faces create greater visual variation and a more natural appearance.

Glaze

A wear layer applied to the surface of the tile before firing that applies the desired design through color, texture, slip resistance and protection.

Ink Jet

Glazing technique referring to the use of a printing process where specialized inks are applied via inkjet heads onto the finish layer of porcelain tiles for highly detailed, realistic designs.

Kiln

Specialized high temperature furnaces used to fire pressed or extruded tiles, transforming raw clay bodies into durable tiles through controlled, methodical heating.

Manufacturing Processes

The methods used to produce tile, including pressing, glazing, digital printing, and kiln firing. These processes affect appearance, performance, and consistency.

Matte Finish

A low-sheen surface that provides a natural look and often improved slip resistance.

MOHS Hardness Rating

A scale measuring a tile's resistance to scratching and surface abrasion. Higher ratings indicate harder surfaces.

PEI Rating

A classification system measuring abrasion resistance for glazed tiles, used to indicate suitable traffic levels.

- Class 1 (PEI 1): No foot traffic
- Class 2 (PEI 2): Light traffic
- Class 3 (PEI 3): Moderate traffic
- Class 4 (PEI 4): Moderate to heavy traffic
- Class 5 (PEI 5): Heavy to extra heavy traffic

Porcelain Tile

A dense, low-absorption tile fired at higher temperatures, ideal for high-traffic, interior, and exterior applications.

Porcelain Slabs

Large format, commonly 120"x60" or larger, thin porcelain surfaces used for countertops, walls, flooring and facades.

Slip Resistance

A tile's ability to provide traction underfoot, influenced by finish, texture, and DCOF rating.

Shade Variation

An industry scale (V1-V4) describing color and pattern variation within a tile collection.

- V1: Very Uniform Appearance
- V2: Slight Variation
- V3: Moderate Variation
- V4: Substantial Variation

Through-Body Tile

Uniform composition where the color, pattern and often texture extend consistently from the surface all the way through the tile with no separate glaze layer.

Synchronized Ink Jet

Use of digital inkjet printers to apply hyper-realistic patterns precisely aligned with the tile's textured surface, creating a 3D effect.

Quarry Tile

Dense, unglazed extruded ceramic tile typically made from natural clay and shale, known for ultra durability in heavy-traffic area. Commonly used in commercial kitchens and/or server areas.

Water Absorption

The percentage of water a tile absorbs. Lower absorption rates indicate higher density and durability.
